Dryden Springs Place.

An Institution offering the most efficient and rational advantages for the care of the sick, at the same time made home-like and attractive in the highest degree to that large class requiring simply rest and recreation.

The elevated extent of country, being nearly two thousand feet above tide, fine landscape, pure, dry air and the far-famed "Artesian Mineral Wells," are among the natural attractions of the "Dryden Springs Place." The great number of flowing wells and the variety of their medicinal properties, comprise the finest collection of alterative and curative remedial agents which can be brought to bear upon the human system. Several of these "Artesian Wells" are magnetic—one flowing to the height of over fifteen feet, and is found to be more highly magnetic than any well heretofore discovered, and the restorative influence of the water upon the system in paralytic cases, as also in many other forms of chronic diseases, truly wonderful. It is now nearly twelve years since this popular and highly successful health institution has been opened to the public, and such is its acquired renown for restoring to health the so-called "helpless," that invalids of this class are constantly resorting here, not only from the towns and counties adjacent, but from the remotest parts of the United States, and cures so remarkable have been effected as almost to surpass belief. It is the most central, favorably located and easily reached health institution in the State, and with its large and commodious building, attractive grounds, extending over nearly a hundred acres, unrivalled "mineral waters," pleasant walks and drives, the well-earned reputation which the institution has attained for "curing the sick," in addition to the unusually pleasant and home-like entertainment offered visitors and transient guests, it is not surprising that the institution has so rapidly increased in popularity and patronage.

The price of board and treatment varies from $12 to $25 per week, according to room occupied. An easy carriage aids the arrival of all trains to convey passengers to and from the House.

BRYANT & STRATTON Business College AND TELEGRAPHIC INSTITUTE, SYRACUSE, N. Y.

This Institution is one of the most THOROUGH AND PRACTICAL of its kind in the United States. The patronage is always large, and represented by young men and women from all parts of the country.

The Theory of Book-keeping and Accounts are PRACTICALLY illustrated by the use of Banks of issue, Shipping, Commission, Insurance, Real Estate Offices, &c., thus affording the pupils an opportunity to become, not only the Clerk and Book-keeper, but the REAL MERCHANT.

The Telegraph Department

Is supplied with several first class instruments, and the modern appliances to regular line cables. Among the numerous patrons in this department may always be found a large class of Ladies, who are receiving appointments upon our Commercial and Railroad Lines. The usual time required to become a good sound operator is from three to five months.
